GreenSpace Brands Discusses Voluntary Recall of seven 'Savory' Organic Pouches in the Love Child Brand

TORONTO, ONTARIO, May 28, 2018 – GreenSpace Brands Inc. ("GreenSpace" or "the Company") (TSXV: JTR) recalled seven Savory Organic baby food pouches and discusses the timeline relating to the recall, the potential implications for babies who consumed the affected pouches and the financial implications to GreenSpace.

Key Timeline of the Recall:

- On Saturday May 26th, GreenSpace was contacted by the Canadian Food Inspection Agency ("CFIA") regarding the results from the testing of products that showed the presence of minute holes in a limited number of Love Child 'savory' pouches, as well as those pouches of a competitor.
- It was determined that in the limited situation where packaging damage is present, a risk of early spoilage or mold forming in the pouch existed.
- GreenSpace and the CFIA agreed to issue a voluntary recall to ensure that no babies were affected by the packaging fault and that the product in market was of the best possible quality.
- On Saturday evening, out of an abundance of caution, a recall was issued for all seven 'savory' pouches that were in market, regardless of when it was manufactured and regardless of whether any defects were visually present.
- Initiated on Saturday, immediately following the recall notice and going forward, GreenSpace staff have been answering calls, emails and social media posts reassuring consumers that we will take full responsibility for the problem and will support a full refund at the store of purchase and/or send coupons for new products.
- There have been no adverse health effects reported by the CFIA

"There is absolutely nothing more important to us than the health of the babies who consume our Love Child products. When the CFIA informed us of the results of their testing on the pouches, we immediately put into effect our recall protocol and withdrew the products from the market." says Matthew von Teichman, CEO of GreenSpace Brands. "The health risks associated with the packaging defect are not due to the presence of serious pathogens, but rather the possibility of early spoilage and potentially mold forming which in a small subset of cases, could cause vomiting and diarrhea. We are not willing to have inferior product in the market, regardless of the severity of the associated issue, and took the action to recall all products that could be affected. We pride ourselves on the quality and safety of the products we produce, and when we find we have an issue, we will not hesitate in rectifying it as quickly as possible."

The affected products represent 7 of the 22 pouches that Love Child has in market and less than 2% of the overall sales of GreenSpace. The GreenSpace quality team is working with the contract manufacturer to make sure this issue is resolved and new controls and processes have been initiated to ensure this issue is not repeated. The team is focused on ensuring we have the best quality 'savory' pouches back onto shelves for our loyal consumers as quickly as possible. Costs associated with the recall will be absorbed by the contract manufacturer and/or recall insurance.
